Mary Young Townsend [6B33]

TOWNSEND—TOWNSEND.

The marriage of Miss Mary Young Townsend, youngest daughter of Edward Townsend, M.A., Professor of Engineering, Queen's College, Galway, with her cousin, Lieut. S. Charles Chetwood Townsend, Royal Artillery, son of the late J. Crewe Townsend, of Cork, was celebrated recently at St. Nicholas' Cathedral, Galway, the officiating clergymen being the Right Rev. the Bishop of Tuam, the Very Rev. the Dean of Tuam (cousin of the bride), and the Rev. Joyner White. The bride was given away by her father, and wore a handsome toilette of ivory satin with a deep flounce of very beautiful lace caught at the right side with a spray of orange blossoms, a chatelaine of the same depending from the left side of the waist. The bodice was held across the front and at the waist by a band of pearl and crystal embroidery, and had rucked gauze sleeves headed by big bows and tabs of satin, the former enriched with double bands of narrow pearl and crystal embroidery. The bridal veil was of handsome figured lace, and the gift. The page, Master William Forbes (nephew of the bride), whose costume was of sky-blue satin, received a gold fox-head pin from Lieut. Townsend. Mr. George H. Townsend (cousin of the bridegroom) acted as best man, and after a fully-attended reception at Queen's College, the newly-wedded pair departed for a honeymoon trip to the English Northern Lakes, the bride's travelling costume being composed entirely of black and white.
